

considered in the indictments were on work of members of the National Erectors' Association, an organization of open shop employers, and thirty-one explosions or attempts were on work of contractors who were not members of the erectors' association.

All But One Arrested.

Only one of the indicted members of the national executive board of the iron workers' association had not been arrested to-night. He is Michael J. Young, of Boston. Young is alleged to have assisted McManis in explosions at Springfield, Mass. Previous to the blowing up of the Boston Opera House, on March 27, 1908, McManis said it was arranged for him to go to Boston and see Young. Arriving at Boston, he said, Young took him about the opera house, in course of construction, and showed him where to pull off the explosion. Young also was associated with McManis in an explosion at Springfield, Mass., April 4, 1911, according to the latter's confession.

Hiram Cline, national organizer for the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, was arrested at his home at Memphis late today and brought here to-night. Cline is the third agent of a union other than the iron workers to be involved in the conspiracy. The others are Clarence E. Dowd, of Rochester, N. Y., formerly an agent for the International Machinists' Union, and Eugene C. Meadows, of Indianapolis, an agent of the carpenters' union. All, it is alleged, were concerned in dynamiting depredations against contractors who employed nonunion carpenters and machinists as well as iron workers.

Meadows, Ernest G. W. Baser, former business agent of the local iron workers' union, and Fred Sherman, Baser's successor, are alleged to have been concerned in four explosions which occurred at midnight of October 23, 1909, in this city. They caused a loss of $15,000 to Albert VonSpreckelsen, a contractor, who had been employing nonunion men of all the building crafts. A branch telephone exchange and a branch public library being constructed by Von Spreckelsen were damaged and his planing mill and the garage destroyed. The explosions in four parts of the city were so executed that they occurred simultaneously.

GERMANY INVITES HALDANE'S VISIT

Announcement Made at Opening of Parliament by Premier Asquith.

BETTER FEELING IN SIGHT

Denied That British Fleet Had Been Prepared for Aggressive Attack.

London, February 14.—The opening today of the Parliamentary session, which is to deal with home rule, Welsh disestablishment and electoral reform, was marked by a statement by Premier Asquith that the visit of Viscount Haldane, Secretary for War, to Berlin, made at the invitation of Germany, and that the conversations between the British War Minister and German authorities had reference to a desire on the part of both countries that the existing tension should be relieved.

Interest in this statement completely overshadowed that in the government's huge legislative program. Since Secretary Haldane's visit to Berlin the English people have been prepared for the announcement that it had to do with German relations, but they hardly hoped that such conversations had proceeded as far as the Prime Minister's guarded speech shows. His hopeful words that he believed the conversations may have more than negative results have caused the gratified satisfaction.

It is evident that Andrew Bonar Law and Lord Lansdowne, leaders of the opposition, respectively, of the House of Commons and the House of Lords, had been informed of the course of the discussion, for although they spoke before the Premier, Lord Lansdowne's support in any move to secure a better understanding with Germany.

The speeches on domestic affairs dealt only generally with the government's legislative program. Bonar Law, in a fighting speech, promised to offer sterner resistance to home rule and other measures.

Only passing reference was made to electoral reform and the possibility of woman suffrage. These measures will come up during the longer debate on amendments to the address, which are to be proposed by the opposition Laborites.

Premier Asquith, who referred to the overclouding of Anglo-German relations as "a most lamentable fact," took occasion to deny the story that the British fleet last autumn was preparing for an aggressive attack on Germany. "It was a pure invention, without a shadow of foundation," he said.

Catching the discontented feeling which is sweeping over the upper part of western field county, the people of Woodland Heights are getting together and will make a demand for a police officer to be stationed permanently in their section. "Should the Board of Supervisors refuse this request an effort to unite with Forest Hill for the purpose of incorporating a new town," said a prominent citizen yesterday. ARIZONA ENTERS UNION OF STATES

Induction of First Governor Is Conducted With Western Simplicity.

Phoenix, Ariz., February 14.—With western simplicity, know elsewhere in matters official as "Jeffersonian," George W. P. Hunt was inaugurated as the first State Governor of Arizona to-day. A few hours earlier in the day word had come by telegraph from Washington that President Taft had signed the proclamation admitting Arizona to the Union, the last of the territories on contiguous soil, and the forty-eighth State.

In the ceremonies attendant upon the birth of the State, and the induction into office of its first executive, the minutiae were conspicuous by their absence, the new Governor being absent to orientation. There was but a meager display even of silk hats, and frock coats, which invaded Arizona only a few years ago.

Accompanied by a number of the newly elected State officers and a few close friends, Governor Hunt, who began life in Arizona a quarter of a century ago as a waiter in a small mining camp restaurant at Globe, walked to the capitol building which stands about a mile from the center of the city.

The inauguration ceremonies were brief. After a prayer by Rev. Sebastian Crutcher, who was chaplain of the constitutional convention over which Mr. Hunt presided, the oath of office was administered by Chief Justice Edmund Rock, of the Arizona Supreme Court, his last official act in that capacity.
